COOPERATION

Check up another victory for cooperation on the part of the Richmond Credit Rating Bureau and the Richmond Police Department. So effective was the victory in fact that according to reliable reports the culprit now reclines in the local bastille sans trousers and sweater or any other kind of outer clothing except such as has been furnished him through the police department. Bad check artists will be inclined to give Richmond a wide berth in the future if this action is repeated a few times.

Wednesday (a bank holiday) a young man walked into one of the local business houses and selected a bill of goods, amounting to $117.50 and tendered a check in payment. The manager of the store although anxious to make the sale was reluctant to let such a large bill of goods leave the store on a check of a man he did not know. He told the purchaser that he could call the following morning for the goods. The merchant retained the check and telephoned the Credit Rating Bureau, stating that his suspicions had been aroused by the would-be purchaser.

In spite of the fact that it was a bank holiday an investigation was started and it was discovered that the man did not have a checking account at the bank on which he had drawn the check, or at any other bank in the city.

The news was immediately flashed to the police department and the merchants in the city who are members of the association to be on the lookout for the man.

Then another circumstance came to light. The same man had entered another establishment in the city, picked out a sweater and a pair of trousers and paid for them with two checks one for $7.50 and the other for $5.00. A description of this sweater and the trousers were included in the description which was sent out.

Evidently thinking that he might make another successful coup from the merchant, where he had obtained the trousers and the sweater, the man again entered this store and began shopping. He was induced to enter a room in the rear of the establishment and while the manager kept him amused a call was sent for the police.

The police arrived on the scene immediately and carted the young man away to the city jail, where he is at present reposing.

But the merchant who held two worthless pieces of paper for a sweater and a pair of trousers, demanded that his property be returned to him and this was done.

Just what method the police employed to keep him properly clothed until a barrel or some other garment could be found was not disclosed.

The incident although in this case an inexpensive one should be an object lesson to the merchant who does not believe that close cooperation with his brother merchants and the police department will give him some good protection.

Incidentally the young man also went to a great deal of trouble to convince an automobile merchant in this city of his wealth and attempted to use one of his checks as a first payment on an automobile. It might be mentioned that he did not get the automobile.

SUCCESSOR TO VAN SMITH IS PUT IN OFFICE

Prison Row

NAMED AT MONTHLY MEET

Session of Board Naming Morrish Is Unmarked by Any Friction

(By Universal Service)

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 13.—Will H. Morrish was chosen as chairman of the State Board of Prison directors at the monthly meeting of that body at Folsom Prison today. Morrish succeeds to the place of George Van Smith of San Francisco, who resigned Thursday after being the storm center of a row over the supervision of the prison.

The session of the board was unmarked by friction.

Van Smith submitted his resignation to Friend W. Richardson, Thursday, to become effective at once. His letter to the executive gave over-work as one of the reasons for his withdrawal and also the fact that his work interfered with his duties as vice president of the Anglo-London & Paris National bank.

The prison board is now composed of Morrish, Julian H. Alco, of San Francisco and Thomas M. Gannon of Sacramento, Gannon, whose name was conspicuously absent from Van Smith's letter to the governor, has been regarded as a supporter of Worden Smith of San Quentin in the dispute with Van Smith in which the warden opposed interference at the prison.

Turkey Raisers May be Forced To Dine on Pork

Thanksgiving Day will dawn cold and bleak for several ranch owners in the Moraga and Lafayette districts unless some sneak thief will be kind hearted enough to return at least one of the turkey herd that was made away with Thursday evening. A wholesale raid was made on three ranches in that vicinity and a total of 25 birds were stolen. Officers are watching bay markets, expecting an effort will be made to dispose of the birds here.

U. S. To Protest Proposed Mexican Anti-foreign Law

(By Universal Service)

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 13.—Vigorous protests against confiscatory clauses in Mexico's pending anti-foreign law will be made immediately upon its passage, it is learned officially.

The measure is now before Congress, approved by the committee, with unanimous consent for privileged action, and may be passed before morning. It will certainly be passed as soon as it can be discussed in the chamber, as there is no opposition in the chamber.

Ambassador Sheffield has thus far made no representation to the government, but has asked the foreign office to explain the meaning and intent of somewhat obscure sections of various contradictory articles.

He is convinced that the intent of the law is to make it possible for a foreigner to hold agricultural lands within the republic; that it is confiscatory; and that it goes beyond the agreement in the claims convention with Ambassador Warren and Judge Payne that Carranza constitution of 1917 would not be considered retroactive.

Ambassador Sheffield has cabled a long report to the State department, outlining the situation and asking for instructions.

At the same time it is learned that other foreign governments, particularly the British, with interests nearing a billion dollars, are preparing to protest as soon as the project becomes a law.

INFANT SAVED BY INHALATOR

OAKLAND, Nov. 13.—Louis Sinagares and his young bride owe the life of their infant son, born yesterday to the quick action of Mrs. Vera Anderson and Lieutenant Fred Carlson of the fire department, who operated an inhalator, the very latest thing in artificial respiration, and brought the baby back to life, after it had been pronounced dead. The mother and father did not know till this morning that their young son, "Jimmy" lived and were joyed with the news.

Scientist Shows Boston Firemen How To Extinguish Flames By Whistling And Using Tuning Fork

Just how much the demonstration of Charles Kellogg, noted scientist, will help the Boston fire-fighters remains to be seen, but scientists regard his use of tone vibrations to extinguish flames as highly important. In his demonstration, Mr. Kellogg extinguished a gas flame by whistling, using only his mouth. He explained that it is pitched very high and vibrates at the rate of 15,000 times a second. He also put out the flame by drawing a violin bow over a tuning fork.

VALLEJO WILL OPPOSE SALT WATER BARRIER

The proposed salt water barrier in San Pablo bay will meet strong opposition as far as Vallejo is concerned, it was intimated by the statement made by C. S. Stanworth, secretary of the Vallejo Chamber of Commerce yesterday, at the meeting of the Salt Water Barrier association, under the auspices of the Vallejo chamber.

Stanworth declared the dam would hinder navigation and commerce in the bay, while at the same time it would have a bad effect on the fishing industry.

Congress of Parents and Teachers Condemn Boy's Week

The stand of the San Francisco Congress of Parents and Teachers in condemning the observance of Boys' Week, will be strongly upheld by the Second District of the California Congress of Parents and Teachers, it was decided at the board meeting of the district in Walnut Creek, Thursday night.

On the other hand, the board gave endorsement to the work of the children's theatre in San Francisco, which is producing a series of six plays for children at the Players' Guild theatre. It was suggested that such performances, with the opportunity for imaginative and creative work might act as a valuable substitute for less suitable entertainment.

Smallpox Under Control Belief Of Authorities

Health authorities of Richmond are now of the opinion that the threatened epidemic of smallpox here has been definitely checked, Dr. C. R. Blake, commissioner of health, announced yesterday.

No new cases of the disease have been reported for a week, Dr. Blake said, and there are now only four homes under quarantine. From the outbreak of the incipient epidemic the health authorities put forth every effort to check it.

In both Richmond Union High school and Roosevelt Junior high school practically every student was vaccinated. The Richmond Health center maintained a clinic every day at first and later every week for the vaccination of those adults and children who were not able to pay for the immunization.

Disappearance of British Submarine Is Still Mystery

(By Universal Service)

LONDON, Nov. 13.—To the mystery as to the reasons for the sinking of the M-1 with sixty-nine British officers and sailors aboard yesterday, is added tonight the mystery as to whether the lost vessel has been located.

This afternoon Admiral Sir Henry Oliver, commander in chief of the Atlantic fleet, received aboard the Flagship Revenge, a wireless stating that the submarine and been located near Start Point, but two hours later the Admiralty in London, issued a statement declining to believe the report.

The official view is that the M-1 is lost with her full complement of sixty-nine officers and men with no hope of rescuing them even if the boat is found. Experts say the crew will die from lack of air in thirty-six hours from the time of disappearance, which period has now elapsed.

The sea is 240 feet deep at the point indicated and it is believed that the pressure of the water would break up the submarine even if she was not broken on the rocky bottom. The depth of the water prevents the divers going down to examine what is supposed to be the hull of the M-1, or the possible wreck of some other vessel.

There was complete pessimism ashore today when it was learned that the M-1 carried under-sea signaling apparatus, but that it has not been successfully used since the boat disappeared yesterday morning. A number of the wives and relatives of the crew embarked in the steel vessel first heard the news of her disappearance by wireless last night.

Great Britain Debt Terms Not To Be Changed

(By Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Any demands by Great Britain for reduction of her four billion war debt as the result of the generous terms granted Italy will be rejected by President Coolidge it became known today.

Such a demand is anticipated. When the Belgium terms were announced the English Press insisted that the British Government should make overtures to the United States and the most influential business interests bore down heavily upon their government to demand lower terms.

The Italian settlement is expected in diplomatic channels to provoke a renewal of that demand.

WHAT MAKES TAXES HIGH?

Congressman Martin B. Madden recently very wisely told the people of St. Louis that the way to eliminate unjust high taxation is to demand that the state and municipal governments join the tax reduction movement. The federal government, he said, is cutting the tax costs at every opportunity, but the taxpayers are not getting the proper results because state and local taxes are gradually going up.

"The difficulty Congressman Madden said, 'lies chiefly with the people themselves. They continue to insist upon the government activity which it ought to assume. They cannot do this unless they are willing to bear the cost. The remedy is forceful public sentiment.'

Federal taxes after the next tax cut, at least, will be down to a point where they will be bearable by practically all of the people of the country. But people are still complaining that taxes are high. The reason is that practically all of the tax, assessed against the ordinary citizen, goes into the state and the local government.

This is of course, as it should be, as the average citizen is more interested in his local schools, his roads, hospitals and the other improvements which he sees every day. But if we are to have these things we must realize that we will have to pay for them. Improvements and progress are of course vitally necessary but it is up to the local citizen to see that these are carried out in an economical way. Taxes will never be as low as they were twenty years ago, because the people will not consent to live like they did twenty years ago. And somebody must pay the piper. In so doing let us see that we do not pay him more than he is worth.

BALLYHOO SHY

The alleged oratorical weakness of the Coolidge cabinet is being discussed with some satisfaction by the democrats. It is true that the president does not possess in his official family such vocalists as Heflin of Alabama, the vitriolic Reed of Missouri, or other noise-producing experts.

Secretary Mellon, who has most skilfully guarded the finances of the people, is decidedly diffident when it comes to making a speech.

Attorney General Sargent prefers to whittle rather than to gallivant around the country exuding vast and copious quantities of language.

Herbert Hoover speaks only when the occasion demands. Business achievements rather than oratory count with him.

Secretary Kellogg makes but few public speeches.

Senator William M. Butler of Massachusetts who is the chairman of the republican national committee and one of President Coolidge's advisers, works on the theory that silence is golden, and he accomplishes much.

The people of the country like this system. They believe in deeds rather than words. The Coolidge administration has no need for a vociferous "ballyhoo."

This country does not want child labor. Neither does it want a constitutional amendment that would injure the youth of the land on the plea of affording it protection.—Chicago News.

Philippine Children Of American Blood, Neglected And Abandoned, To Be Cared For By American Guardians

Group of young women of American blood educated by the American Guardian Association. Inset—Mrs. Mary Frances Kern.

Little girls of twelve years traded to Chinamen for pigs. Eleven-year-old girls found blinded by disease. Girls of like age locked in chicken-coops, vermin infested, because they would not obey the demands of their masters. And all of them children of American blood—light-haired, blue-eyed, with true American energy and spirit of adventure dominating them, children who are likenesses of boys and girls encountered about any public school in America!

It is to solve this problem of caring for and educating neglected and abandoned children of American blood in the Philippines that the American Guardian Association of Manila to the American people for help. To save these girls and boys from immoral exploitation and vagabondage a nation-wide campaign is under way, as a result of this appeal stamped with General Wood's approval, to raise a fund of $2,000,000 in this country. Invested in the United States through a trust committee of representative citizens, it is planned that the Association, incorporated in 1921 through the efforts of General Wood, utilize the income.

"The American people have been so generous in their response to the cries of children all over the world," asserts General Wood's personal appeal, "that I have no hesitation in appealing to them for children of their own blood, who are in need of help. Saved from the fate that threatens these children can be converted into citizens who will be a credit to their fathers' race, and to our nation."

Though numbering less than 7,000 in a total population approximating 11,500,000, Americans in the islands hitherto have supported the Association alone, caring for 145 boys and girls at a cost averaging $14 per child monthly. But, 18,000 all told, there are 4,000 needy children of American blood on the organization's books, and 2,500 are in desperate distress.

General Wood is honorary chairman of the representative national committee supervising the campaign. Stressing the urgency of the problem, former Governor General W. Cameron Forbes, of Boston, is the general chairman. Chief Justice Taft, Vice President Harbord and Hugh L. Scott, Martin Egan, of New York; Col. William G. Edens, of Chicago, along with scores of others, are among distinguished Americans actively endorsing the movement.

Mrs. Mary Frances Kern, of Chicago and New York, just returned from the islands, is directing the fund campaign. While intimate appeals will be made in the East, middle West, and the farther West, in turn, headquarters have been opened at 8 West Fortieth Street, New York City, where contributions may be sent. Loyal Americans in the Philippines are financing the campaign, which is being conducted at a very minimum of expense, so that every dollar given will go to actual relief.

"These children would justly be the pride of any American community," said Mrs. Kern. "Death of and abandonment by American fathers are the foremost causes of distress. But these same causes of sorrow to innocent children are found countless in our own prosperous homeland. Cared for, taught to be self-supporting, these boys and girls become farmers, teachers, nurses; and the girls are eagerly sought as wives by ambitious, upright men. Americans in the Philippines have done splendid service for our country. The big-hearted American women of Manila shed tears as they tell of the horrors in which these little ones have been found. But the problem is so big it is beyond them. It is a national obligation. I know our people quickly will erase this blot on American prestige in the Orient now that they are informed of the situation."

Preserving Food for the World

What the Industry Means to the Farmer and to the Purchaser

FOR the American farmer the growth of the canning industry in this country has spelled progress with a large P. Not only has it brought him financial success, but it has raised his standards, to the benefit of himself and the country in general.

In an earlier day, when the farmer purchased seed, he was inclined to think more about the cost than the quality. It was natural, because he was much less prosperous then, than now, and his profits were small, compared to the profits of the middle-man, the grocer, etc.

Then, as the canning industry developed, and the canners needed all that the farmers of the vicinity could raise, they began to contract beforehand for the crops that were to be raised, as their own success depended upon their good faith with the public, in the matter of supplying high-class foods. So, in order to insure this, they included in the contract the stipulation that a high grade of seed should be planted. And, to make sure of this, they sold to the farmer the grade they wanted, and at a lower price than he would have to pay for it elsewhere.

It was inevitable that a few seasons of producing would convince the farmers that the best is always cheapest. It has come to seem to them a waste of time to spend their labors upon anything less. Thus has their standard been raised, and the consumer has reaped the benefit thereof.

To the farmers the canning industry means a sure market for their crops. No longer do they need to worry over the possibilities of disposing of them. All that they need is already contracted for. Their job is merely to see that the order is filled with the very best crops they can produce.

Nor is this left to chance. Field men are sent out by the canners to watch the progress of every crop which has been contracted for. The farmer may not lose on his job nor in any way neglect his crops. And when the crops have ripened the field men notify the farmers that the crops must be harvested immediately.

Within twenty-four hours afterward, the food is in cans, ready to be shipped. It has had no chance to spoil. The cause is true of fish, meat and milk products. From the time the food is actually being gathered until it is in the can, sealed and cooked, is a matter of a few hours only. This should be a message to good cheer to Mrs. Housewife who likes to know that the food she is serving her family is as fresh and as pure as it is possible to get.

And thus the farmer, himself, benefits in both ways, being a consumer of canned foods as well as a grower of the food that goes into the cans.

To him the canner is the man who changes Nature's jewels that grow in his orchards and fields into the heap of gold that grows ever bigger and brighter in his village bank.

SYNOPSIS

Connemara Moore is aboard a yacht in Long Island Sound in company with one Pooch, an utter stranger. It is after midnight. Suddenly they find their craft is being pursued by "revenuers." Connemara was expected to announce her engagement tonight but, instead, garbed as a nun, she stole away from Aunt Celina's Connecticut home. She accepted a ride from David Lacy, a stranger, crossed the Sound with him on a ferry, and, after driving across Long Island and boarding the yacht, here she is.

"What the hell kind of game is this?" he demanded finally.

"What do you mean?" asked Connemara. "It's no game to me, I assure you."

"Don't get gay with me," Mr. Pooch snapped. "Didn't get a good look at you before in that rig—you ain't Sweetie."

"No, I certainly am not," Connemara admitted. "I—I think there's been some mix-up—"

"Mix-up! And you putting it over on me!" Mr. Pooch exclaimed furiously. Then suddenly he was towering above her. "Come across with that dough!" he commanded.

"McTish! McTish!" She just had time to shriek as Mr. Pooch's fingers closed around her windpipe.

CHAPTER VII

Don't be Parker.

By Dorothy Parker

Mr. David Lacy, of New York, Paris, London, Venice, Petrograd,

"McTish! McTish!" She just had time to shriek.

Monte Carlo, Palm Beach, and sometimes w and y, was at in the full enjoyment of that pool-like placidity of mind which usually characterized him. Indeed, he was aware of a distinct and curiously unpleasant sensation of mental unrest. There were ladies, in various sections of the world, who would have been ingeniously delighted by the news of this condition. In vain had they tried, individually, to bring him to it.

In the first place—and in most of the other places—there were his thoughts on Sister Connemara. "Sister!" he said bitterly to himself as he stumbled along the ditch in what he gathered to be her wake. "Swell Sister she is."

The comment pleased him, so low was his mental state. He repeated it, though inaudibly, several times. He even went into the matter on a larger scale, and thought, grimly, that she was never going to have any chance at the old but ever popular role of being a sister to him. But he ran right on, along the ditch.

It now seemed to Mr. Lacy that from the first moment of their meeting, he had grasped that Connemara was no real nun. He felt that he deserved a good, heaping measure of credit for his discernment.

"Thought she fooled me, did she?" he asked himself. He felt it would be not at all unpleasant to explain to the lady, in somewhat full detail, how strikingly little had been his belief in her vocation.

Now, of course, to have a young and low-voiced lady, disturbingly fragrant of mimosa, turn out not to be a nun at all is one thing. It opens up a wide field, gives birth to a series of pleasant plans for the future, and induces a healthy glow of anticipation. But, shortly after this discovery, to become a firm believer in the theory that the same young lady is one of the principal figures in a band of desperadoes, is distinctly something else again. Perhaps she was the Master Mind of the gang; possibly she had worked up to her present fifty-thousand-dollar job by way of a long apprenticeship in holding up cigar stores; maybe her photograph had been displayed in the papers as one of the mighty sisterhood of bobbed-hair bandits. It was a good thing, Mr. Lacy explained to himself, that he had found her out in time. There's no use trying to do anything for those people; they simply drop right back into their old ways again. The best thing to do is leave them alone; sooner or later they are bound to get theirs.

Yet he ran on along the ditch. And then there was his car, tossed aside like a withered violet in the dust of the road behind him. It would require an experienced worker in mosaic ever to put it together again. The thought further depressed Mr. Lacy. It was not that, he did not know where his next Isotta was coming from. It was not the money so much as the principle of the thing. Aside from a justifiable pride in the manner in which the car had come to be his, David had a deep fondness for it. He grieved for the sudden breaking-off of a beautiful relationship.

Still David ran on, into the darkness that had swallowed Connemara and Pooch so greedily. He loved the outdoors and couldn't get on without his exercise, yet the thing was beginning to pall. The sky had clouded thickly; the trees, whispering darkly together like old wives in a sick room, tossed their boughs and showed the under sides of their leaves. Winds sprang up, it seemed to David, from all directions, and not far off, thunder growled savagely. In his ears sounded the complaining of troubled waters. That must be the Sound, somewhere ahead. Well—perhaps the steep-chase would end there.

From behind him, hoarse shuttings punctuated his journey. Backward glances showed him a flash-light, careening like a drunken firefly, as its bearer stumbled along the ditch. The mysterious strangers from the Pierce were evidently going right on through with the thing. Their words were indistinguishable, but their tones indicated that they were calling upon David to stop. Yet, though well brought up, he paid not the slightest attention to the remarks that they addressed to him.

There was a report, from behind, and something whistled shrilly entirely too close to his ear for any real comfort.

"The party," murmured David, "is getting rough."

"And so was the ditch. David, quickening his speed, came suddenly into close personal contact with the stump of a tree that had apparently died in agony. Simultaneously injuring his shin and his self-respect, he went headlong among its twisted roots, rolled from them, over and over in the slippery dead leaves of the ditch. With but a few brief words of hasty criticism of the dead tree, David picked himself up, found a footing, and started again on his travels. Again there was a report, decidedly closer this time. Again the screeching whistle troubled his ear.

"Hey, stop, will ya?" bellowed the voice back of him. It added a few words having to do with its owner's wishes for David's future. "Well," David told himself, "we might as well get this over with."

And he stopped and turned to face his pursuers, wearing an expression of courteous surprise. They came up to him, the first one, who carried the flashlight, swearing glibly but without inspiration. The light revealed him as a heavy, dark man, with more than his legitimate quota of unshaven jaw. He wore badly assembled garments, and affected a lavishly plaided cap. Of the second figure, David could distinguish nothing more personal than that it was considerably shorter than the first.

David watched the light glint along the shining surface of the first man's revolver. The evening's events had taken on the quality of a prolonged dream. He had the curious lack of amazement which one meets all the outrageous new occurrences of a nightmare.

"Doubtless," he mused, "this stout lad will turn out to be O'Malley of the Royal Mounted."

Bewitching and Simple Frocks

As long as the material is printed that is used to develop the frock pictured to the left, it may be of either silk, cotton or novelty crepe. The lines are straight, but there is a hidden fullness in the blouse which lengthens the skirt. A high style-note also is the jabot of French net which falls straight down the front of the dress. At the right side of the round neck reposes a yellow rose. Medium size requires 4 1/2 yards 36-inch material.

One must be tailored during some part of the day, even if the frock be made of heavy cinnamon-brown linen. The model shown to the right is trimmed with self-color mercerized braid, and fastens at the left side. The round sleeves are gathered into straight and narrow cuffs. Medium size requires 4 yards 36-inch material and 2 yards of braid.

Epworth League Takes Journey Around World

Tired, perhaps too full of good things to eat, but still enthusiastic, the members of the Wesley Epworth League returned last evening from their famous trip around the world.

The journey was started from the church and the first stop was made in Dixieland. Miss Ruby Williams home was the scene for this, and hot biscuits and chocolate were served in genuine southern style. Cotton was growing in profusion and Conn. Bastian entertained the travelers with many rare negro selections.

A voyage was then made to Hawaii at the home of Mrs. Howard Johnson, where a huge new moon was the only light that gave romantic atmosphere to the island scene. Pineapples, and water were served and Mrs. Violet Williams sang Hawaiian selections.

A long jump was made from the tropical island to the land of the Blarney stone at the home of Richard Crigler where sandwiches, potato chips and green river were served. The shamrocks were in evidence here and several jolly Irish songs were given by Miss Geraldine Ripley.

Japan, the land of tea and rice cakes was at the home of Miss Maurine Jones where the guests were seated on brightly colored cushions to partake of tea and rice cakes which were served. Many Japanese curios were on display and the room was filled with Japanese lanterns which gave a glow to the room. Elaborate kimonos were worn and a Japanese song was given by Agnes Pieper.

The travelers then turned their steps homeward and arrived in the United States at the church where popcorn and apples were served. A program was enjoyed here and

"The Border Legion," a Paramount production of Zane Greys immensely popular novel with Antonio Moreno and Helene Chadwick in the principal roles, is the feature at the Richmond theatre for the last time today.

The story was adapted to the screen by George Hull, William Howard directed the production, his first for Paramount.

The story is the second of Paramount's widely advertised "Famous 40" by this author to reach the screen. The other was the natural-color picture, "Wanderer of the Wasteland," shown some time ago.

By taking "Wanderer" as a standard of comparison, one would think that "The Border Legion" would suffer. To the contrary, it's better, if anything. Moreno has the role of Jim Cleve, a young cowboy, who quarrels with his sweetheart, Joan Randle, (Miss Chadwick), and goes off and joins the Border Legion, a bandit gang which terrorizes the country, murdering and plundering in its raid on goldminers and towns. The girl, repenting, goes in search of him and is captured by the leader of the gang and brought to his shack back in the mountains. Cleve sees her and arranges her escape when the men are on a raid in town. The girl is captured and Jim shot and left for dead on the side of road. He turns up unexpectedly at the cabin and turns the tables on the outlaws.

Rocky Fellows has the role of the bandit chief in the picture and Gibson Gowland is his lieutenant. Charles Ogle plays the ranch-owner of the Legion. Others in the big cast are James Corey, Edward Gribbon and Luke Corgrave.

Other features on the same program include "King of the Cats," a Lloyd Hamilton comedy; "Felix A Friend in Need," a Felix the cat comic.

California Is Showing Sally Of The Sawdust

A charm that will rub the frowns from the face of mankind is D. W. Griffith's newest picture, "Sally of the Sawdust," now being shown at the California theatre.

It is all sunny laughter, merry jest, quaint drolleries tucked into an interesting story that marches along to a finish as funny and exciting as anything that has ever been delivered to the silver screen.

Certainly this new United Artists Corporation release is Griffith, all Griffith, but something different from the Griffith with which most are familiar. He has whittled aside all problems and all lessons, to tell one of the gayest stories of his career; easily the funniest picture he has ever made and one ranking with the greatest of screen comedies. Amid the sidelights of a circus with animals, bands and clowns, he has found the circus juggler and his fiery, fearless daughter, who believes her "Pop's" rogueries are all the merits of a great man. To them the glamor of the circus is more than tinsel and the life is more than make-believe. Through comical hardships and serious gaieties, they trudge along with complications and carnivals, by way of blind-baggage and intrigue, up to the door of the Judge's house in the end, in the merriest, most exciting finish the screen has offered in many months.

This classic of entertainment establishes the stardom of Carol Dempster who gives a memorable role as the circus wife. With her is W. C. Fields, the famous theatrical comedian now starring in the Ziegfeld "Follies." Alfred Lunt, Effie Shannon and Glen Anders, all stage favorites, are given new laurels by the Griffith direction.

Few pictures have offered such variety of scenes, such casual lavishness in dress as does "Sally of the Sawdust."

Without a hesitating moment from the start, it gathers refreshing speed as it proceeds, until it establishes itself as one of the quickest, merriest, most human and thoroughly entertaining films ever shown.

Unquestionably it is a new triumph for D. W. Griffith, who again proves himself as great in one type of picture as another. In his way, "Sally of the Sawdust" is as fine as those sterling screen classics, "The Birth of a Nation" or "Way Down East."

Other features on the same program include "Varieties," a scenic novelty, International News, Larry Canelo at the organ.

Argument Is Under Way In Golett Trial

who are representing the four defendants, Edwin E. Reeves, Mrs. Peggy Reeves, Franklin P. Davis and C. E. Peacock.

Following the argument by Pierce, assistant district attorney Wade Snook will present the final argument for the prosecution. It is not expected that the trial will go to the jury until the latter part of next week.

In his argument asking the extreme penalty for the defendants, Coakley among other statements made the following:

"Though everything tends to show that the defendants knew Golett oil stock was a fake, the very fact that they sold this stock for much more than its supposed price is sufficient evidence of grand larceny intent. The evidence shows that stock purchased from Gough at 4 to 8 cents a share was resold as high as $6 a share.

"The method of the defendants in keeping Gough a man of mystery to investors was a clever trick which has all the earmarks of a bunco game. They knew very well if a man of Gough's type was seen he would not be accepted for what he was supposed to be."

HUSKY ARRIVES FOR BIG CLASH WITH BRUINS

Six years ago today, a horde of Huskies from out of the north invaded the den of the Golden Bear and that avalanche swept Bruin from its path and scattered the California eleven in the debris of the onslaught.

Five times since that memorial day the Washington Huskies tried to repeat that victory but the wonder team of 1920 and its followers have always been able to hold the Husky horde. That defeat in 1919 was the last defeat California has received at the hands of a college.

Thirty purple jerseyed warriors, managers, rooters and about 200 football fans arrived at the Bear's lair yesterday morning and held a workout, the last one, on the turf of the Memorial Stadium yesterday afternoon.

Coach Bagshaw's men and the coach himself feel that the Cardinal encounter was the most difficult game of the season. The Californians figure that this will be their hardest game.

Both teams while not neglecting the defense, are pitting their efforts in developing a stonewall offense. Smith has had his men working like Trojans all week mastering the art of carrying the ball where the other fellow isn't. The Huskies are doing the same.

Sportographs

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Promoters of New York are anxiously awaiting word from Jack Kerns, manager of Mickey Walker, world welterweight champion, now in Los Angeles, regarding a welterweight battle between Walker and Tommy Milligan of England. The fight has been planned for the Christmas fund card of December 23.

HUSKIES GET WIRES

SEATTLE, Nov. 13.—Telegrams of encouragement from the backers of the Washington eleven before the game with California tomorrow are being sought. Coach Bagshaw will read all the wires to the team before they enter the conflict to let them know that the Washington residents are behind the team every inch of the way.

MANY "INTER" GAMES

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Messages received in various parts of the country indicate that 1925-26 will see more intercollegiate games than ever before in history. Colleges in every corner of the country are clamoring for a game with a team from another section. Many connections are expected to be put through for contests.

FOOTBALL GAMES HIGH

The high cost of football is becoming ever higher as the years roll by. The larger colleges think nothing of running up in to hundreds of thousands of dollars for a season but the University of Pennsylvania is believed to have the record. It costs this school $22,000 to put each man on the field for a period of one season.

NEW TIMING POPULAR

The new advocated system of timing football by a number of plays per period and not by 15 minutes, is growing stronger and stronger all the time. Today a number of games all over the country will use 40 plays to a period. It was tried out at Boston last Saturday and worked to a fair degree of success for a starter.

YALE FAVORED

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Yale is favored slightly to win over its ancient rival Princeton today by the experts. Some who may not be so expert seem to have a better idea though and figure the chances of the team on paper. From the looks of the pencil marks, the Yale football will have no more chance than Willard against Jack.

GAS WARNING GIVEN

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 13.—Declaring that many deaths are caused every winter by gas poisoning from automobiles, the State board of health has warned against the running of gasoline engines of automobiles in closed garages.

Fairmede's New Clubhouse Will Be Finished Soon

Within a week the Fairmede Golf club's new clubhouse will be completed, the furnishings installed, heating and lighting systems working, and the building ready for formal dedication, W. A. Murphy, manager, announced yesterday. The date of the formal opening has not yet been decided upon.

Ample water supply has been developed and is now on the ground. This allowed further improvement of the course, which has been delayed over the summer months due to lack of water. Several permanent trees on the first nine holes have been completed and the temporary greens are in excellent condition. Within ten days the second nine holes will be under way, Murphy said.

Cardinal Coach Addresses Rotary

Andrew Kerr, assistant football coach of the Stanford University, and for 25 years a coach of athletics, told the members of the Richmond Rotary club yesterday that the best way to train youth, spiritually, morally, intellectually and physically is by setting a good example. Kerr told many interesting football stories and summed up with a timely talk on the coming big games. Dr. U. S. Abbott was chairman.

Archie McVickers played two piano numbers and thrilled the audience with the finish of his work. Instrumental numbers given by high school boys, Edward Gregg, Fred Childs, Jerry Jarman and Norman Gregg were enjoyed. The guests included Principal B. X. Tucker, Prof. George Morris and Prof. Theodore Matsen and Coach Hill of the high school, Principal F. C. Shallenberger and Physical Instructor Seavright of Roosevelt Junior high school and Miss Nora Ashfield, assistant city superintendent of schools and County Scout Master George were among the prominent guests.

Perpetrator Of Robberies Is Young Man

(Continued from Page 1) of the work of two white holdup men began coming into the Cavalline and Winters police. The ranchers that reported holdups were those of George Akery, J. Caughy, W. H. Buck, Garnet Smith, B. Thurber and J. Pinkham.

On the Akery ranch the thugs were resisted by the Japanese caretaker and his wife. The hold-up men overpowered them, stuffed clothes in their mouths and bound them to chairs with hay wire, it was reported.

To prevent the three children of the Japanese from spreading the alarm they were also tied and gagged, the police were told. The same treatment was accorded a Japanese family on the Smith ranch, the police learned. When the extent of the depredations of the pair was learned, an alarm was broadcast throughout Solano and Yolo counties. From the victims the police obtained a description of the two men and the license number of a small touring car in which the robbers were said to have made their escape.

Constable George Rice of Winters and his assistant, Tom Rice, encountered Isaacs alone, driving the automobile bearing this license number near Winters today. He was arrested and brought to Vacaville, where he was questioned.

Isaacs admitted the robberies, according to Rice, but refused to divulge the name of his companion.

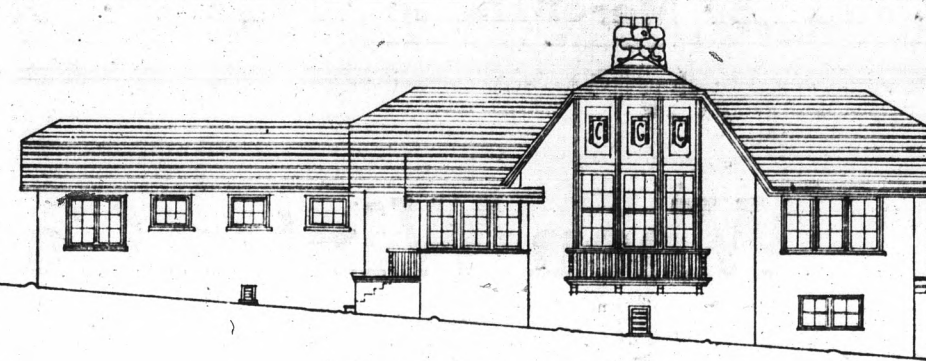

Isaacs was employed as a buyer for a Winters fruit company, and was well acquainted with Japanese ranchers in Solano and Yolo counties.

Mrs. L. C. Sprau Rites Are Held

Mrs. Lillian C. Sprau, was laid at rest in Sunset View cemetery yesterday morning following services conducted from the Wilson and Kratzer chapel. Rev. C. R. G. Poole of the First Baptist church officiated.

Carquinez Golf Club's New Home Which Will Be Dedicated Tonight

This handsome new clubhouse that has been erected by the Carquinez club at a cost of over $15,000 will be officially dedicated and thrown open to the members at ceremonies tonight. This building is one of the finest clubhouses in the bay region and with it the Carquinez golf club is one of the most popular golfing sports in this vicinity.

FRONT ELEVATION.

CARQUINEZ TO BE DEDICATED THIS EVENING

Formal and official dedication of the Carquinez Golf club's new clubhouse on the Giant highway, will take place this evening with appropriate ceremonies and entertainment.

The building represents an investment of $15,500 and stands as the center of a golf club for which $35,000 has been expended. The new home of the club is a one-story stucco building. The interior is palatial, with its heavy upholstered furniture, its wide cheerful fireplace, draperies and its attractiveness draws one there for an hour's rest.

Inspection of the building with all its facilities will take place tonight between the hours of 8 and 9 o'clock. Between the latter hour and the early hours of the morning dancing will be enjoyed with the S. H. Peterson orchestra furnishing the symphony. At midnight, a supper will be served and a short program held.

The present membership of the club is nearing the 300 mark. That number represents the capacity membership of the organization and it is expected that within a few weeks the charter will be closed. The house committee, Frank Gordon, Dr. A. B. Hinkley and J. E. Durand, are taking charge of the dedication ceremonies.

The Carquinez Golf club course is one of the finest in the state of California at the present time. It was the first club in the state to bring the cottonseed husks into use for greens, but since that method was adopted here seven other clubs have followed.

The majority of greens are made of grass or sand, mostly of sand. Grass of exceptional quality must be obtained when it is used as continual walking prevents its growth. Golf experts, however, declare that the husk greens are not inferior to grass.

effect on salt conditions. Marketing of the present produce is more necessary than more produce, Stanworth declared, and he pointed out that with the shortage of rail facilities growers are turning to water shipping. He declared that nothing should be allowed to interfere with the bay's navigability.

Stanworth went on to say that "shipping is sensitive to any barrier that would delay of hazard navigation. A salt water dam would be far more of a barrier to shipping than a drawbridge at a low level."

Many of the audience inferred disfavor for the dam project from the remarks of Major J. N. Schultz, army district engineer, who said he had made no thorough study of the project, but it could not help but have a fundamental effect on navigation. He then stressed the importance of navigation in the development of San Francisco bay.

Schultz told of the great tonnage shipped up and down the bay, through Carquinez Straits and on the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers. Navigation is an important question to the navy department also, he said, in view of the location of the Mare Island navy yard.

The project was defended by Col. John G. Little and Assemblyman Robert B. McPherson. McPherson told of the sympathy for the plan in the state legislature, where he said it had been given great interest and thought. He cited the present waste of fresh water, which could be averted by such a dam.

Jack Herman Cleared By Commission

(By Universal Service)

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Jack Herman, heavyweight boxer, was called before the boxing commission today on a charge that he had faked Gene Tunney in Kansas City on the night of July 3, 1925.

Herman accompanied by his wife and lawyer, appeared and claimed the affidavit had been obtained under duress. He denied its truth, although he admitted signing it. He also denied that he had read it before signing it and claimed it had been falsely obtained. He denied that he had ever engaged in a fake fight with Tunney or anyone else. The commission accepted Herman's denial and temporarily washed his hands of the affair.

Shenandoah Inquiry Judge Advocate Asks Release From Board

(By Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Captain Paul Foley U. S. N. today asked Secretary of the Navy Willbur to relieve him as judge advocate of the board of inquiry into investigation of the Shenandoah disaster.

Captain Foley's action follows testimony by Mrs. Zachary Landsdowne, widow of the Shenandoah commander that he had sought her to make a false statement before the court of inquiry. Secretary Willbur took the captain's request under advisement but declined to comment on it in any way.

ARMY UNFAIR IS CLAIM OF COL. MITCHELL

(By Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Accusations of unfairness by the army prosecutors and interference by the general staff in the conduct of the trial flew thick and fast at today's session of the Mitchell court-martial and caused a wrangle which nearly brought about a long postponement.

The charge of unfairness was based upon the War Department's failure to comply with a single request by Colonel Mitchell's defenders for papers and records which would enable him to support his case.

When Representative Reid, Mitchell's counsel, informed the court that he was unable to proceed until the prosecutors would agree to produce the papers, the court took under consideration an adjournment for two weeks to enable Mitchell to get the information he wanted.

Postponement was averted just in the nick of time when a special messenger, hastily dispatched by the war department, arrived with some of the necessary papers.

Reid declared the "War Department and the President, who ordered this trial, ought to have all the proof available for us on twenty-four hours notice."

"Instead of the usual presumption of innocence" Reid added, "we are presumed guilty here and must prove and double prove every statement made by the accused."

A burst of applause greeted him in reply, Colonel Moreland attacked Reid for making a "speech to the galleries." He asked that Reid be prevented from making a "stump speech" and "political oration."

At the opening of the afternoon session, the trial judge advocate attempted to place Captain Paul J. Foley on the witness stand. An objection by counsel for Mitchell that the defense had had no opportunity to examine the witness was upheld.

As he was leaving the courtroom, Captain Foley said he would take the witness stand before the Shenandoah inquiry board Monday to reply to the accusations of Mrs. Lansdowne.

Celebrities Are Brought Into The Rhinelander Suit

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 13

In the final efforts to win the love of Leonard Kip Rhinelander last of the historic Huguenot family, Alice Beatrice Jones, daughter of a mulatto handman, flaunted the name of Broadway stars before her youthful sweetheart.

This was revealed at the trial of marriage annulment suit here today when 21 of the girl's love letters were read into the records. Al Jolson, warbled his way into the case unwittingly. Irving Berlin flitted through equally unaware of the role for which destiny was casting him the "Big Boy" of Broadway and the little King of Jazz played lesser parts in Alice Rhinelander's romance than did Edward Holland a New Rochelle fireman and Robert L. Ross, a publishers clerk.

For Eddy gave Alice a ring and a watch she asserted in letters to dearest Len and Robert was her first love of all, while Al—but harken to Alice's own description of the blackface mammy singer.

"I was talking to Al Jolson today. But he is some flirt with the girls there, there is four fellows with him, the cottage next to ours and they have wire instruments with them and we had some orchestra here today. Well dear shall close until tomorrow and hope you are well and please answer soon as I am longing to hear from you again."

Laughter came from the crowd in court as the aged Isaac Mills, chief of counsel for the Rhinelander read the reference to the comedian. Obviously astonished, Mills stared around. "Now who is he. This Jolson." Again the crowd laughed and the venerable jurist explained hastily. "Well, I am quite innocent in the matter I assure you."

Such is fame. Even Mrs. Rhinelander, author of the letter was shaken from the condition of depression, into which she has been slipping and joined in the merriment. On the witness stand, however, Leonard Rhinelander sat with features frozen in a frown.

As for Irving Berlin he received less consideration from the dark Alice. "Well my darling talk about men up here. All a man want. Boilin the music fellow has gotten a camp next to us. He is a swell chap and lots of actors hear." The theatrical references were in the summer of 1922. With that Berlin and Jolson passed out of the picture.

JOHNSON GETS JUDGMENT

Justice of the Peace John Roth has granted a judgment of $137.50 to L. Johnson, house mover, against R. M. Slater, employed by Johnson, occupied one of the latter's houses and was supposed to do repair work on the building. No rent was paid and no work done so Johnson filed the suit for rent arrears.

Key System Rate Case

KEY SYSTEM TRANSIT COMPANY, in June, 1925, applied to the Railroad Commission for an adjustment of its rates. The Commission gave the company, a prompt hearing, at which were presented thirty-five exhibits giving in detail full information of the Company's property and operating expenses. The matter contained in the exhibits was substantiated by the testimony of engineers and accountants.

Each witness was cross-examined by the representative of the Eastbay Cities. We feel that we can properly say, that the cross-examination strengthened the contentions we made. The salient facts brought out were that:

1—The operative property of the Key System Transit Company is worth from $28,000,000 to $31,000,000. Three different valuations were presented, each of which was arrived at by following recognized standard methods;

2—The exhibits showed that the net earnings of the Traction Division are less than 2% and those of the Trans-Bay Service less than 5% of a modest valuation.

These net earnings are more than a million dollars short of what they should be. The unimpeached evidence presented before the Railroad Commission shows that prevailing rates of fare represent an adequate return on a property valuation of only $7,000,000, or about one-fourth the actual value of Key System properties. Any valuation that may be finally arrived at will prove the imperative necessity for substantial rate increase in order that the present service may go on.

We want the people of the Eastbay communities to know the facts. We believe they wish us to receive a proper return. We shall be glad to have our patrons ask for information.

Good transportation is important and necessary to all of us alike. It is our business and your business to see that it is rendered satisfactorily and this can only be done when, under efficient management, the rates of fare provide an adequate return on the value of the property.
